Bolivia Rebel Is Quoted as Seeing 'Che'

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Sept. 3 (UPI) — A captured Bolivian guerrilla today was quoted as saying he served under the command of Cuban revolutionary Ernesto "Che" Guevara, whose whereabouts have been a mystery since April, 1965.

The captive, Jose Carrillo, was the only survivor of a 10-man guerrilla team caught in an army ambush last Thursday near Masicuri in southern Bolivia. Carrillo was wounded in one arm and taken to a hospital at Vallegrande.

The newspaper Presencia quoted Carrillo as saying Guevara was at a Bolivian guerrilla training camp at Nancahuazu.

Carrillo said other Cuban guerrillas guarded Guevara and would not let the Bolivian trainees go near him.

"Guevara was very scrupulous and always saw that we were relieved on guard duty," Carrillo added.

The captive said Guevara took part in a raid July 7 on the village of Samaipata in southern Bolivia in which a soldier was killed, and left Bolivia several days later.
